Policeman Waldron, who yesterday applied for retirement from the force because he had served forty-two years, said that his son had never been drunk and that he could not have been drunk when he was taken to the station.

As this is the second case of a similar nature in two days an official investigation will be made by the Health Department. John Schimpf, ir., was struck by a street car and an ambulance surgaon declared him to be suffering from alcoholism, permitting him to lie in a cell all night. He died in the morning.

Then a Third avenue electric car came along and the bluelacket protested against the color of the car, declaring that British red should be tabooed in street cars, and accentuated his remarks by grabbing steaming hot ears from Cohen's cauldron and hurling them at the offending car.

Cohen protested at this seizure of ammunition in a time of profound peace, whereupon McCarthy turned upon him and knocked him down. Then he grabbed the cauldron and fell with it upon the prostrate Cohen, the boiling water going all over the peddler.

Cohen's cries attracted the attention of a policeman, who arrested the sailor and summoned an ambulance.

Dr. MacDonald, who took Cohen to Gouverneur Hospital, found that he was badly scalded and might die. McCarthy was held to await the result of the man's injuries.

fessed that they had planned to kill Sheriff Barciay and Jaller Messmer and then free all the prisoners. The plot was frustrated and the two pecters were placed in dungeons.

But the other prisoners took up the plot, without the slaying feature. While the prisoners were taking their regular exercise the three men accused of highway robbery made their way unobserved to a vacant cell on the third tier.

There they used a side rall of an iron bed to force apart the iron bars, which had been sawed in an attempt to escape three weeks ago.

Silding down the roof they entered the kitchen. The cook ran at them with a soup lade, but was overpowered and bound hand and foot. He was told that if he gave an alarm he would be killed. From there the men made their way to the wall, which they scaled with a plank.
